

- In the centre write a topic you need to revise, then around the outside put six key things you need to remember. These can be done as pictures, symbols or key words.
- You can also use this approach for planning extended answers to exam questions. Put the question in the middle and then six facts you could use around the outside.
- Challenge yourself and place them so the facts link together logically.

